and Telex services, but state radio said there were work stoppages in a number of plants. Communications lines for all but one of the major Western news agencies in Poland were cut in Warsaw Monday night.

The Polish military took power on Sunday to avert what it said would be civil war and put an end to months of turmoil. The agency said that the authorities' decision had met with the approval of Communist Party activists but said that the attitudes of Solidarity activists varied.

Urban told foreign reporters on Sunday that Mr. Walesa was not among those arrested. But Warsaw Radio carried no word from him Monday. One of Solidarity's most radical leaders, Zbigniew Bujak of Warsaw, who evaded capture after the army and police detained dozens of activists and dissidents on Sunday, was arrested on Monday.

Israel, Moving Fast, Asserts Sovereignty Over Golan Heights

JERUSALEM — In a series of stunningly fast parliamentary moves initiated just hours after Prime Minister Menachem Begin left a hospital and convened an emergency Cabinet meeting, Israel on Monday night annexed the occupied Syrian Golan Heights and asserted its perpetual sovereignty over the territory it captured in the 1967 Six-Day War.

Stunned members of parliament, voting in the face of a boycott by most of the 48 members of the opposition Labor Party — which in principle has long supported annexation of the Golan Heights — approved the decision. Most of the opposition refused to participate in the vote, not because of any objection to applying Israeli sovereignty to Golan, but because of the manner in which the measure was rushed through a marathon session of the Knesset.

U.S. Halts Food Aid To Poles

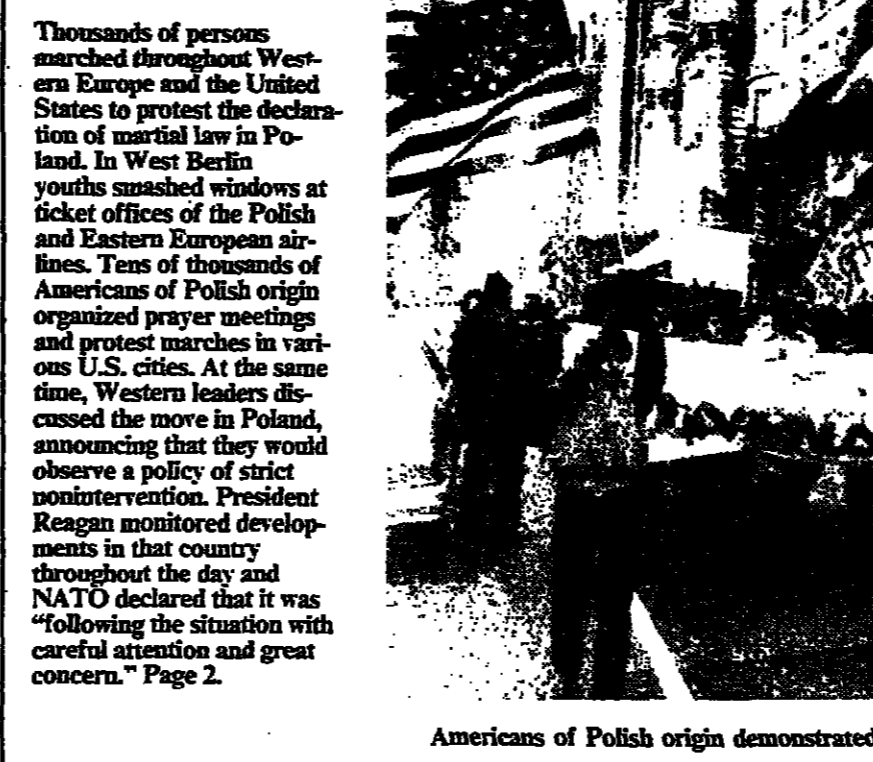

Private Relief Is to Continue

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Monday that the United States has suspended future government food assistance to Poland while it assesses the situation in that troubled nation. Private U.S. food shipments to Poland will be allowed to continue, Sen. Charles H. Percy, Republican of Illinois, said after attending a classified briefing by State Department and CIA officials.

Egypt Condemns Plan; Syria Asks UN Meeting

CAIRO — Egypt asked Israel on Monday to drop its plan to annex the Syrian Golan Heights, an Egyptian Foreign Ministry official said. Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali conveyed the request at a meeting with the Israeli ambassador in Cairo, Moshe Sasson.

The annexation move was contrary to "all charters and international agreements and challenges international public opinion." "Egypt, while announcing its absolute rejection of this measure as an illegal measure contrary to the spirit of peace in the area ... calls on the international community represented in the United Nations to assume its responsibility," the statement said.

Percy's Support

Sen. Percy indicated that he supported the decision to suspend the aid. "At this time, when it's very hard to tell which way it is going, we ought to probably suspend operations for 48 hours or so until we can assess how this is going to unfold," Sen. Percy said. However, Republican Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and S.I. Hayakawa of California called for extensive U.S. food aid to the "Polish people." Sen. Helms said, "This country cannot turn its back on people who are hungry in the dead of winter."

Polish Backdrop: Communist Failure

By John Darnton New York Times Service

WARSAW — Behind the workers' revolt that began with strikes in the summer of 1980 and grew to a revolution on the shoulders of the Solidarity union lies a story of failure — the failure of Communism to deliver on its promise of a better life.

Food Shipment Blocked

PARIS (Reuters) — Two chartered airliners laden with food and other supplies for Poland were blocked at Orly airport near Paris on Monday, following the closure of Polish air space by the country's new military leadership. More than 130 tons of tinned meat and fish, milk powder, chocolate, lemons and baby foods were donated by the public in the Paris region during the weekend toward a "Christmas for the Poles" aid program.

French Communist Line on Poles Casts Shadow on Leftist Alliance

By Richard Eder
New York Times Service
PARIS — The crackdown in Poland has made a serious crack in the uneasy relationship between France's Socialists and their Communist partners in the government.

A rally and march took place Monday afternoon to protest the proclamation of martial law and the arrest of the Solidarity leadership. Led by the Socialist Party and the major pro-Socialist labor federation, the thousands of demonstrators parading from the Gare Montparnasse to the Invalides represented every current in the French left except one.

U.S. Senate Passes Property Claims Pact With Prague

WASHINGTON — The Senate has approved an agreement between the United States and Czechoslovakia settling claims by U.S. citizens against Prague for assets seized by the Communists after World War II.

particularly close, has produced a rare, temporary joining of forces on the political scene. For the first time in 15 years all the labor groups, except the CGT, met to call for participation in a demonstration.

Party Unity
Both the Communist Party and the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGT) — France's largest labor grouping — boycotted the occasion.

The Italian, Spanish and British Communist parties have all expressed condemnation of the Polish state of emergency and the arrest of Solidarity officials, and have called for their release.

In Paris, the official Communist newspaper, l'Humanité, said that Solidarity was to blame for the Polish crackdown, called on the French to say and do nothing to enflame things and denounced the right for exploiting the situation.

Since most of the Socialist leadership, including the party's first secretary, Lionel Jospin, was at the head of Monday's march, this was a direct challenge.

All this has put Mr. Mitterrand and his government in an awkward situation. As a result, there has been a certain amount of wavering in the official statements. Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson said on Sunday that the Polish situation was strictly an internal matter, that France intended to do "absolutely nothing" about it and that he was pleased that there was no sign of external intervention.

Editorials in the pro-government press on Monday rebuked Mr. Cheysson with various degrees of emphasis. The most emphatic was Liberation, which called his reaction a "shame" to France.

The feeling in the Socialist Party that strong condemnation is needed contributed to a later statement on Monday by Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy which said that an interruption of liberalization in Poland would have "grave consequences."

The government, however, does not wish to make any statement that would force the Communists to consider withdrawing their four ministers. Mr. Mauroy said on Monday that there was "no difference of sensibility" among the government ministers. A few hours later, evidently bowing to party feeling, he said that if he were not a government minister, he would have been among the leaders of Monday's march.

The distinction between Socialist governmental prudence and Socialist Party feeling is a tenuous one. There is no sign so far that party divergences on Poland will force the Communists out of the government, but their presence has come under its severest test so far.

Legal Counsel Is Sought For 6 Held in Seychelles

DURBAN, South Africa — Mercenary leader Michael Hoare says that Seychelles President Albert René is being asked to permit a prominent European lawyer to defend six mercenaries left behind in last month's abortive coup attempt in the Seychelles Islands, the South African Press Association reported.

Mr. Hoare allegedly led an attempt on Nov. 25 to overthrow Mr. René that fell through when customs officials discovered weapons hidden in the luggage of a band of mercenaries. Mr. Hoare and 43 mercenaries hijacked an Air India jet and forced it to fly to Durban, leaving behind six who were captured.

Martens to Form Belgian Coalition Of Center-Right

BRUSSELS — Flemish Socialist Christian Wilfried Martens on Monday announced agreement on the formation of a center-right Belgian government, ending a three-month political crisis.

Mr. Martens, four times premier in the past three years, said the French-speaking and Flemish-speaking Liberal and Socialist Christian parties had agreed to form a coalition to try to save Belgium from its worst economic problems in 30 years.

He said the coalition, which will hold 113 of the 212 seats in the Chamber of Representatives, would seek emergency powers until the end of next year enabling it to apply some measures in its economic program without putting them to parliament.

The program includes tax cuts for industry to boost output and restore competitiveness, stiff cuts in public spending to contain the country's budget deficit, as well as wage restraint.

Alexeyeva Gets Visa to Leave as Soviet Citizen

MOSCOW — Lisa Alexeyeva, the daughter-in-law of Andrei D. Sakharov, received the exit visa Monday for which the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize laureate and his wife staged a 17-day hunger strike.

Miss Alexeyeva, 26, was handed a green exit visa that requires her to leave the Soviet Union within a week. She also exchanged her internal Soviet passport for a document identifying her as one of the few Soviet citizens permitted to travel abroad.

Miss Alexeyeva said that she will leave for the United States before Dec. 20, but not before Wednesday. That is the day Mr. Sakharov's wife, Yelena G. Bonner, plans to return to Moscow from Gorki, 400 kilometers (250 miles) east of Moscow.

Miss Alexeyeva said that she was surprised that officials at OVIR, the agency that deals with emigration matters, did not strip her of Soviet citizenship. Soviet emigrants often are stripped of citizenship.

"They know very well that I don't intend to return," she said.

It was disclosed earlier that Soviet secret police threatened to force-feed Mr. Sakharov and his wife during their hunger strike, but the couple now are being nourished.

The first account of the Sakharovs' health came Sunday from Miss Alexeyeva, who had a three-hour reunion with them in their Gorki hospital suite.

Miss Alexeyeva, on whose behalf the Sakharovs began their protest last Nov. 22, will be going to the United States to be with Mrs. Bonner's son, Alexei Semyonov.

who she married by proxy in Montana last June. He emigrated to the United States in 1978. The Soviet government does not recognize proxy marriages.

Miss Alexeyeva and a Sakharov family friend, Natalya Gasse, returned to Moscow after a one-day trip to Gorki to verify reports by the KGB secret police that Mr. Sakharov and Mrs. Bonner were recuperating from their fast.

She revealed for the first time that they were nearly comatose when officials took them Dec. 4 from the apartment where Mr. Sakharov has lived since his banishment.

Mr. Sakharov and his wife were put in different rooms in the Semashko hospital and told that they would be forcibly fed if they did not end their protest.

But finally, Miss Alexeyeva said, KGB Maj. Igor P. Ryabinin told Mr. Sakharov, one of the Soviet Union's leading dissidents, on Dec. 8 of the decision to let his daughter-in-law leave the country.

Mr. Sakharov and his wife agreed to end the strike as soon as they received independent confirmation of that decision, she said. That came the next day when Mr. Sakharov and Mrs. Bonner heard Western radio broadcasts reporting that Miss Alexeyeva had been told by the Moscow KGB that she would be allowed to go to the United States.

Since then, Mr. Sakharov and his wife have been eating grated apples and carrots and drinking grape juice.

Miss Alexeyeva said that they appeared thin, weak and shrunken when she saw them, but that Mr. Sakharov still displayed vitality.

WHAT MEANS HAPPY CHRISTMAS IN ANY LANGUAGE?

A new Montedison: the way ahead for a change of course.

Chairman Schimberni's address to Shareholders and Investors

Dear Shareholders,
Montedison as a company and group is going through a profound change of direction towards better times. It has changed, is still changing, and after fifteen years of difficulties will soon be an industrial group that is worth investing in.

EVENTS
In April 1980 we announced that the holding company would be set up. It is already in existence.
This plan was put into effect at the end of 1980. It has provided the main impetus for change. It has encouraged a businesslike approach at all levels: it has geared planning and action to the realities of the market-place by enhancing aggressiveness and competitive capacity.

Qualified people with international experience have been brought in from outside, and are producing good results.
A new management style is taking the upper hand, less conditioned by the external environment, with more emphasis on managerial skills and readiness to innovate.

OUR CREED
We believe in the still vital role of the chemical industry in the world economy.
We believe in the growing and crucial importance of the entrepreneurial spirit.
We believe we have to look beyond the domestic limitations of the Italian market and gain an international vision and insight.

THE NEW MONTEDISON
The new Montedison is also a new departure on the Italian economic scene, despite the difficulties that this presents. The new Montedison is what we wish to make it, backed by our efficiency and determination. No-one can cover up our mistakes: we can and must rely only on ourselves.

GOALS FOR THE NEXT TWO YEARS
The goal is to alter the Group's product mix to expand high-value output and innovation in line with rapidly changing market requirements.

Chemicals: Montedipe and Montepolimeri are feeling the effects of the crisis in the automotive, building and other industries, as well as the revaluation of the dollar. Their results reflect the difficult trading conditions. However, special action is being taken to retrieve their position along with stable solutions to current problems. Ferimont has achieved a definite improvement in its margins, especially on export markets, where trading conditions are very favorable. Farmoplant has increased its exports and is now looking for growth based on launching new products, such as those developed from phenoxenes, Resan, Atasimont, Ausolat, Ausin, Montelias and Vinasil, which all produce special chemicals and additives, though less affected by trading difficulties, are nonetheless in the process of rationalizing their operations and introducing new high-yield products. Acna's situation has improved since last year; it has recently received a cash injection and is committed to successful completion of its two-year restructuring plan.

The strategy needed to achieve this objective is clear enough:
a) the Group at present operates in too many areas; these will be reduced to fields in which we can actually gain a significant share of the world market;
b) we shall increase the amount of finance available for investment in growth areas. To this end activities will be concentrated in profitable operations, while those outside the mainstream strategy will be sold; at the same time the Parent Company and its subsidiaries will increase their share capital by rights issues.

Food Markets Give Clues to the Character of a Country

ment stores (museums of the present) and cemeteries (to see how much respect is shown the dead), but my own favorite handle with which to pick up insights is the food market.

There is an abundance of good-quality food, well displayed.
But sometimes scarcity is obvious, as in Bulgaria, where onions and herbs are the only commodities well represented. In Moscow's Central Market, even in midsummer, the only vegetables available in quantity may be jade and garnet cabbages, huge orange-red carrots, and fresh or pickled cucumbers.

ive-shaped honey vats, and all sorts of meat and dairy products in staggering abundance. Yet even here, I noticed one pre-Easter Saturday, an old man and woman fast. Surprised and delighted to find live bass in tubs, she took two large flapping fish. But when she asked the fishmonger to kill them, he refused. "I sell fish," he said. "I do not kill fish." Her chauffeur had to oblige, stunning the bass by slapping their heads against the fender of the limousine, then slipping them into the string shopping bag he had brought.

There is more restraint and deliberation at the elegant delicatessen around the Place de la Mar-deleine, such as Fauchon, Hédiard and Le Comptoir Gourmand, where packages are neat and tiny, and prices sky high. But do not draw conclusions about the French commitment to quality until you see the haute junk food sold in the enormous supermarchés, where precooked, dried and shriveled bouillabaisse, choucroute and cas-soulet are bought along with cottony, tasteless croissants and bread.

The Rue Cler market in Paris can give you the flavor of France.

Flavorful Places to Shop on Three Continents

ALTHOUGH it is hard to imagine being bored by any food market, no matter how small, the following stand out in memory as being exceptional. Equally memorable are countless food shops and stands that line the streets of many cities, most notably Hong Kong, Singapore, Istanbul, almost any city in France and Italy, and in the souks of Mar-rakesh and Fez. In Morocco, many cities in Europe also have markets in major squares one or two days a week.

open from 7 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. from Monday to Friday and until 5 on Saturday. Friday and Saturday are the busiest days. Steaming hot wursts are dispensed at many stands to sustain vendors and shoppers chilled by the early morning air.

The level of respect accorded food is obvious, too, to those who know where and how to look. Under the bright umbrellas of Münich's daily outdoor Viktualien-markt, one may see gardens of fruits and vegetables, bouquets of flowers and fresh green herbs,

Naples and Venice and the frozen water market set along the tiny, mountain-rimmed harbor of Bergen in Norway.

Throughout the market, there were flower sellers, displaying bouquets from the half-open backs of small pickup trucks. To keep the flowers from freezing, panes of glass were fitted over the backs of the trucks, and low candles burned to produce heat. The effect was like so many small shrines, dark but festive against the gray-white winter.

Car of Future: A Chip Off Electronics Block

By John Holusha New York Times Service

DETROIT — Under the hood of every gasoline-powered car that General Motors makes is a small computer...

$90 to $100 to build as the car is being assembled. The price of the equipment at retail is several times higher.

Once the basic electronics are on a car, the additional cost of adding another function is small, said Richard Rosso, Chrysler's chief engineer for body electrical systems.

Advances in power train controls, such as computer-controlled fuel injection, depend more on emissions and mileage regulations and economics than on technology.

At Ford Motor, the new Lincoln Continental is equipped with an electronic instrument panel that, among other things, will calculate how far one can drive on the fuel left in the tank.

As Detroit tells it, these features, made possible by microelectronics, are only the beginning. Cars of the future may contain computer-controlled suspensions, capable of switching from sports car handling to a soft, boulevard ride at the touch of a button.

Many industry planners, in fact, predict that in an era of smaller cars, electronics will distinguish the top of Detroit's line from its basic models.

But it remains to be seen how much customers will accept and, more important, what they will pay for.

Mr. Lyon cautions, "You have to keep the human factor in mind. We can design a car that looks like the cockpit of a 747 airplane. But would your grandmother really like that?"

Outside impacts A decade ago, the only thing electronic on most automobiles was the radio. But the need to provide both greater fuel efficiency and reduced exhaust emissions in big engines has pushed the big three U.S. automakers toward electronic engine controls as a replacement for the complex mechanical systems that produced bulky performance and made service difficult.

By contrast, Japanese manufacturers, making smaller, lighter cars, were able to meet the emission and mileage standards with conventional technology. As a result, they trail U.S. companies in using auto electronics, although few doubt their ability to apply such electronics if needed.

Prices in Sharp Decline on NYSE

NEW YORK — Unrest in Poland, problems in the Middle East, and bad news on interest rates combined to send prices on the New York Stock Exchange sharply downward Monday.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed off 15.03 at $71.48, and declines led advances by a six-to-one margin.

The market's decline hastened Monday afternoon after reports that Israel's parliament completed the first step in approving its proposed annexation of the Golan Heights.

Michael Metz of Oppenheimer & Co. said the decline resulted from about one-fourth higher interest rates, one-fourth Poland, one-fourth Israel and one-fourth "fear of the market itself."

Wall Street also was distressed by the Federal Reserve's report released late Friday that the nation's money supply surged $4 billion in the latest reporting week.

The only major bank now quoting a 15 1/2 percent prime is Continental Illinois of Chicago.

Kaufman Sees U.S. Deficit At $90 Billion

LONDON — The U.S. budget deficit will total $85 billion to $90 billion in fiscal 1982 and $65 to $75 billion in fiscal 1983, Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers said Monday.

He told a banking conference here that U.S. government agencies will borrow another $20 billion in fiscal 1982, bringing net marketable borrowings by the government to between $105 billion to $110 billion.

Mr. Kaufman said he believes the U.S. bond market rally, which started in early October when interest rates on the highest-rated utility debt were at 18 percent, is at least 75 percent complete.

He said he expects U.S. inflation, as measured by the consumer price index, to be between 8 and 9 percent in 1982, but said he sees no evidence that the decline in inflation is of greater proportion than would be expected in a recession.

On monetary policy, he said there have been indications in recent months that the U.S. Federal Reserve has taken a less monetarist stand by pulling away from close targeting of the monetary aggregates.

Mr. Kaufman said the Fed's money supply targets will limit economic growth next year. Taking its 4 percent target for M-1B next year and an inflation rate of 8 percent, he said he expects economic growth will be minimal.

U.K. Industrial Output Rises 1.7% in October

LONDON — U.K. industrial production rose a provisional 1.7 percent in October, the sharpest rise in 2 1/2 years, and was up 1.6 percent in the latest three months, the Central Statistical Office reported Monday.

However, the recession held down consumer demand in the normally buoyant pre-Christmas period as retail sales in November fell a provisional 1.4 percent from October, returning to September's level, the Trade Department said.

Dollar, Gold Trading Hectic In Reaction to Polish Crisis

LONDON — After soaring early Monday on investors' wariness over developments in Poland, the dollar eased late in the day as relative calm returned to European currency markets.

Nervous investors had rushed in a brief but frantic scramble to buy gold and the dollar, regarding them as the safest havens for their money at a time of uncertainty after the declaration of martial law in Poland.

The rush for gold began in Hong Kong where the metal rose $13.43 an ounce to close at $421.86.

It continued at the opening in London, jumping more than $8 an ounce from Friday's late price to $420.50. But gold then settled back to close at $417.75 in the absence of new developments in Poland and the bearish pressure from a strong dollar, dealers said.

effect on the dollar of the latest U.S. money supply figures, which were larger than expected and aided a further surge in Eurodollar deposit rates.

But Eurodollar rates declined somewhat during the day in a technical reaction to the sharp increase over the weekend.

Share prices fell in London, Tokyo and Frankfurt.

Progress Is Cited In Talks on Steel

BRUSSELS — Progress has been made on the steel trade in talks between senior U.S. and EEC officials, Roy Denman, EEC Commission director-general of external relations, said Monday.

He said the two sides will look for ways to improve the trigger price mechanism controlling imports of cheap steel into the United States, to placate U.S. steelmakers who complain they face unfair competition from subsidized EEC producers.

In Washington, a Commerce Department spokesman said a representative of the EEC is expected to meet with U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige later this week on the question of steel exports to the United States.

Great Potential Seen In Eurodollar Futures

By H.J. Maidenberg
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Of all the financial futures introduced in recent years, none has as much potential for use by the international money market as does the Eurodollar futures contract that started trading last week on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The reason is that Eurodollar interest rates are beyond the control of all central banks, thus the most sensitive in the international money market.

The new Eurodollar futures market eventually could be used by monetary authorities as an inexpensive, convenient and highly leveraged method of intervening in support of their currencies, according to John Blin, senior vice president of the New York Futures Exchange.

Mr. Blin, an economist, is regarded as one of the designers of Eurodollar futures, which he helped develop for the Chicago Mercantile Exchange's International Monetary Market several

U.S., Firms Testing Metal With Memory

By Alison O'Neill
Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — It can straighten teeth and may intercept blood clots. It can stop runaway trains. It could help send telephone conversations hundreds of miles.

This miracle worker is a metal called Nitinol, a material with a "memory." It is alloy of nickel and titanium developed at the U.S. Naval Ordnance Laboratory.

Nitinol was developed in 1962 by a Navy physicist who was looking for a way to get Navy missiles through the heat of re-entry into the atmosphere.

The metal derives its powers from "shape memory," which is activated by changes in temperature. The phenomenon is demonstrated by dipping a thin, rigid strip of Nitinol into a container of ice water. Upon removal, the strip becomes flexible and can be bent. When it reaches room temperature, the strip will straighten itself again, returning to the shape it "remembers" as its original state.

The principle behind many of the feats Nitinol can help perform is that, when its shape changes, force is created. Therefore, if overheated bearings on a freight train car begin to cause its axles to fail, a piece of Nitinol in the braking apparatus can be activated by the heat, causing the metal to shorten and release a spring-loaded pin, which in turn starts to put the brakes in motion.

"The military uses [for Nitinol] are, of course, our prime mission in life, said Navy physicist David Goldstein. "...its use in piping systems aboard ship and tubing systems aboard aircraft."

Mr. Goldstein said representatives of Raychem Corp., of Menlo Park, Calif., "saw Nitinol being demonstrated at a trade show" and developed "shrink-fit plastic tubing" for pipes in Navy ships and, later, weldless connectors for the tubing in F-14 fighter planes.

Mr. Goldstein and Navy colleague John Tydings last summer released their research on a Nitinol connector for optical fibers, which are planned for use in carrying telephone messages.

"The fiber optic system will carry as much message traffic as a phone cable three inches in diameter," he said. "It's the coming thing in communications. The problem is that you can't use one glass fiber over 650 miles, so if the [connecting] fibers are one-half misaligned, you lose information."

He added that he expects the Nitinol fiber connector to do the trick.

Possible biomedical uses of the metal include a Nitinol blood clot filter, which would be inserted into the body in its straight, low-temperature shape and which, when heated by the blood, would return to the filter shape it had when it was created. In orthodontics, braces made of Nitinol have proven less painful than those made of stainless steel.

years ago. In an interview last Friday, Mr. Blin said:

"Consider first the sheer magnitude of the Eurodollar market. It is staggering. While the exact amount of dollars floating outside the country is not known, most money market dealers place the total close to $1 trillion.

"Actually," he continued, "much of these 'overseas dollars' exist only on the books of foreign branches of American banks, mostly in London, rather than in the overseas vaults of domestic or other financial institutions."

What is more important, he said, is that the interest rates on Eurodollars have long been considered the most valid barometer of the international cost of money. The London interbank offered rate is the base borrowing cost of these dollars, which are lent to foreign governments as well as to large corporations.

"One major reason is that these Eurodollars are not influenced by the monetary policy of the Federal Reserve because they are outside the country," Mr. Blin said. "Similarly, the Bank of England exercises no control on these funds because they are not sterling. Unlike ordinary bank deposits here or abroad, Eurodollars are not subject to central bank reserve requirements, which are a factor in determining the prime and all other lending rates."

Much of today's international financing involves Eurodollars, which are mainly deposits from the oil exporting countries, Mr. Blin said. "The banks that use these dollars for lending have always faced big risks because of the often volatile rate moves. Often, the petrodollars deposited in London are for shorter periods than the maturities on their loans to customers."

As for the Eurodollar futures, the lenders can lock in rates just as grain and other commodity dealers can hedge their exposure.

Growth Expected

"Also," Mr. Blin said, "government monetary authorities could eventually use this market, in effect, to insure against adverse fluctuations in the value of their currencies through the purchase and sale of Eurodollar futures. Assuming, as many of us believe, the Eurodollar futures market will grow large enough to accommodate such operations."

Traditionally, a central bank seeking to stabilize the value of its currency would either support it through purchases and sales or enter into various "swap" arrangements.

The Chicago Mercantile's three-month Eurodollar time deposit futures contract carries a face value of $1 million. The minimum price move is $25 per contract. For the first time in any commodity futures market, the underlying goods are not deliverable, although the delivery months are January, March, June, September and December. Instead, all contracts are settled for cash.

No Eurodollar futures contracts will change hands, just as New York banks operate in the London Eurodollar market without one dollar actually moving between the two cities. When the contract expires, the exchange will, in effect, average the interbank rates of the leading banks in London on that day and that will be the final settlement price for the delivery.

At last Friday's close, for example, the active March Eurodollar delivery at "85.80" was off $150. The 85.80 means a rate of 14.20 percent on an annual basis on the March contract (100 percent face value minus 85.80 equals 14.20 percent).

Saudis' Oil Revenues Soared 75% in 1980

RIYADH — Saudi Arabia's oil revenues soared 75 percent to an estimated $85 billion in 1980 due to production and price increases, the Saudi central bank said Monday.

The kingdom was the only OPEC member whose production rose in 1980, increasing 400,000 barrels a day from 1979 to a daily average of 9.9 million barrels, according to Saudi Arabian monetary agency figures. Of that, 97.5 percent was exported.

NOBODY WILL EVER KNOW THAT YOU MADE A FAVOURABLE INVESTMENT IN KRUGERRANDS.

Gold. Throughout history—and especially since the invention of paper money—gold has been a favourite safeguard against the upheavals and uncertainties that sweep the world. In today's climate of uncertainty, more and more investors are seeking methods to increase the security of their future investments. So they're turning to Krugerrands.

Krugerrands are bullion coins: basically you pay for the one troy ounce of fine gold they contain. And as standardized coins they are recognized as legal tender around the world. There are more than 33,000,000 in circulation, selling at the daily gold price plus a very small premium which covers minting and distribution costs.

Some of the premium is even recoverable on resale. Consequently, a minimum rise in the price of gold means you show immediate profit. Alternatively, since the long-term trend in the price of gold has so far been upward, the coins may be held for the future. Short- or long-term.

Krugerrands are one of the wisest investments around. You can follow their value by checking the daily gold price, and some newspapers even publish daily Krugerrand prices.

How do you invest in Krugerrands? Nothing could be easier. As the most widely traded gold coin in the world, you may buy a single coin or in quantity—with complete discretion—through most banks, stock brokers and bullion coin dealers. Krugerrands are readily available in sizes to suit all budgets (for smaller budgets there are 1/2 oz, 1/4 oz and 1/10 oz coins). In some countries they are even exempt from sales tax or any other tax.

If you want to know more about buying Krugerrands, go and see your bank or investment broker. If you would like to have further information write to:

BOOKS

AGAINST OBLIVION By Jonathan Power. 248 pp. £1.95. Fontana Books, 14 St. James's Place, London S.W.1. (Published in the United States by McGraw-Hill, 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020, under the title "Amnesty International: The Human Rights Story," 128 pp. $9.95.)

Reviewed by Bob Donahue. MORE than 100 children are known to have been taken to Bengul's central Ngaragen prison. So went the London press release of May 14, 1979, that was to bring down a gruesome African potentate. It was all a spectacular exercise in defeating tyranny with publicity, the sword with the pen, depravity with what Jonathan Power says was merely "diligence and persistence."

As Power, a London-based journalist whose columns appear in the International Herald Tribune, tells the story in his thorough and readable history-cum-portrait of Amnesty International, the organization had been accumulating data on Emperor Bokassa's repressive rule for several years. "Amnesty" maintained its work almost alone, as it does on dozens of other seemingly unimportant countries.

The Amnesty representative in Paris who culled the evidence that led to the press release preferred that Power refrain from naming her. Yet his book is less about the world's horrors than about the thousands of ordinary people in 140 countries who work quietly to document and end them.

Horror there are plenty, Amnesty counts 60 countries in which evidence of official torture has surfaced in the past five years. Nearly half of the world's governments hold prisoners of conscience — defined in Amnesty's statutes as persons "imprisoned, detained or otherwise physically restricted by reason of their political, religious or other conscientiously held beliefs or by reason of their ethnic origin, sex, color or language, provided that they have not used or advocated violence."

Power deals at length with Central America (Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua), China, Brazil, the Soviet Union, Argentina, Bokassa's erstwhile Central African Empire and South Africa. He skips over Cambodia, Haiti and Uruguay, but then, many a reader will prefer to skip over the meticulous account of a young Brazilian geologist, sent to the pope in 1971.

In a Soviet courtroom, an officially appointed psychiatrist in the case of a woman accused of anti-Soviet agitation is quoted as testifying that "the absence of symptoms of an illness cannot prove the absence of the illness itself." This is about as close as we come to humor.

Yet Power's is not finally the despairing story it would seem by rights to have to be — as if we already knew much about cruelty that is not as much about another sort of dignity. For 20 years Amnesty International has been at it. The year 1961 was the centenary of the freeing of the slaves in the United States and of the serfs in Russia. In London, Peter Benenson, a Catholic lawyer of Jewish descent, born of English and Russian parents, who had been active in human rights for some years, got the idea that political prisoners (in Portugal, say) could be saved if enough people wrote letters to the offending government.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

FOR the five thousand players who traded to Fresno, Calif., for the Spring National, a well-organized and tournament with local hospitality that has never been surpassed on such an occasion, the most delightful feature was a theatrical performance. It was "Annie Bid Your Slam," a modified version of a famous Broadway show, produced and written by Peter Rank, who has long been one of the best West Coast players and here revealed that his talents lie in many directions.

Annie Doulby and her three farming sisters arrive to play in their first tournament, bringing their own table and chairs. Having full faith in "biddin' what comes naturally" they reach the last rounds of the Swiss Teams tied with a men's foursome from New York headed by Frank Scientific.

Annie's bidding and play are of the shotgun variety, as she demonstrates on the diagramed deal, which was projected to a side wall for the benefit of the audience. When she opens one no-trump one of her sisters raises directly to seven no-trump, a reasonable shot. Some North players would use Gerber to make sure that the partnership is not missing an ace, but the Doulby family is used to playing without conventions.

When the dummy appears Anne quickly counts 17 tricks and announces that she will take diamond finesse for the 13th trick. This brings home the slam and the spotlight moves to the other table where this is the final deal. Frank's team has the lead, and he will win if he duplicates the grand slam results. He and his partner embark on eight rounds of sophisticated bidding, announcing alerts at every turn and thereby mystifying their opponents.

Frank's teammates, who have finished playing against Annie, are now center stage conversing nervously. "If we are to win," says one, "Frank has to reach seven no-trump and misplay it." He then explains why Annie's decision to finesse in diamonds is technically inferior. South can and should take the diamond ace and all his winners outside the diamond suit, taking care to wind up in the South hand at the finish. When he leads toward dummy at the 12th trick, with one diamond and one club in his hand he can count the original distribution. He knows that West began with five

Mahres Sweep Slalom; Stenmark Finishes 3d

Stenmark, the Olympic champion and a three-time World Cup winner, suffered his third straight slalom setback.
The Mahres became the first U.S. brothers and the first American skiers ever to place 1-2 in a World Cup event. They had finished 1-3 in a cup giant slalom at Aspen, Colo., last year, won by Phil.

McEnroe Victory Gives U.S. Davis Cup

By John Feinstein
Washington Post Service

CINCINNATI — For John McEnroe, it was the ultimate.
Treated like a hero for one of the first times in his life, he played his best tennis in the clinches Sunday and finished an extraordinary year by winning the Davis Cup for the United States.

He was given one admonition by chair umpire Robert Jenkins for slamming a ball high into the stands in frustration. Once, referee Kurt Nielsen gave Ashe a "friendly warning" after McEnroe yelled at one of the service judges.

He then Clerc broke McEnroe in the third game of the third set, there were many here who thought his chances quite good. But from 1-3, McEnroe went on a tear, winning five games in a row, breaking Clerc twice and winning the set, 6-3. He finished it with an ace and went to the dressing room, for the break, seemingly in command.

Clerc called McEnroe in the fourth set, winning the first three games and moving to a 5-1 lead.
So it came down to one final set. McEnroe and Ashe did not want things to come down to a fifth match. And McEnroe wanted this one because Davis Cup is important to him. In that final set he produced some of his most remarkable tennis in an already remarkable year.

Quite a Year
The victory gave McEnroe his third victory in three days. It also meant that in one year he had won Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and three points in a Davis Cup final.

McEnroe's serve, always his most important weapon, carried him in the last set. In five games, he lost four points on serve; he put 17 of 23 serves into play and won 16 of those points.

McEnroe, at 22 the game's dominant player, had minimal problems Sunday with the officials and with Clerc.

Consult a Consultant

WASHINGTON — Before Richard Allen became National Security Adviser, he was part-owner of a consulting firm. There is nothing wrong with this because Washington is full of consulting firms made up of both Republicans and Democrats. We in Washington take them for granted. So I was thrown for a moment, when I was in Worcester, Mass., and a lady in the audience asked, "What does a Washington consultant do?"

I promised her that as soon as I got back to Washington, I would find out and give her the answer. I went to see a consultant I knew and said, "Charley, I know this is a stupid question, but what do you do?" "I don't have to tell you," he said defensively. "I'm not trying to get you in trouble," I said. "But a lady in Worcester asked me the question and I couldn't give her an answer. The Richard Allen business apparently has made people curious."

For him, if the official doesn't feel he can do it? "Of course. But it will cost you more, because that means we have to leave the office and take a government official to lunch or dinner." "It doesn't sound like hard work." "That depends on how dedicated you are. Our business doesn't just depend on access to government and congressional figures. Many times we have to pretend we have access to them." "How does that work?" "Well, suppose you have a client from some South American country and you want to impress him with the fact that you have clout in Washington. You take him to a restaurant where the White House crowd hangs out and you wave at them even if you don't know them. "Let's say Ed Meese or Mike Deaver are at another table. You excuse yourself and go over to them and mutter something like 'You were great on 'Meet the Press' last Sunday.' Meese and Deaver don't know who the hell you are, but since they meet so many people they pretend they do. You walk back to your table and say to your client, 'Those guys really drive you wild. I'd like to meet them because I didn't return his last telephone call.' I did that once with Ham Jordan during the Carter administration and got Argentina on a $50,000 retainer for a year."

The Château of the Marquis de Sade

By Susan Heller Anderson

CONDE-EN-BRIE, France — Like many of the French nobility, the Comte de Sade returned to his family's castle after World War II to find it bombed, sacked and riddled with shrapnel. He has devoted the last 35 years, and about $500,000, to restoring the historic rooms where the Cardinal Richelieu slept and where Watteau and Oudry painted.

The great-great-grandson of the Marquis de Sade, he learned about his notorious ancestor while rummaging through trunks of letters and manuscripts hidden in an attic closet. He has devoted the last 35 years to restoring the Marquis to respectability in French literature.

Works Banned He says that when he returned to the castle in 1946, he had never even heard of Deception Allphonse Francois, Marquis de Sade, whose works were banned in France until 20 years ago. In attacking the debris left by the Germans, who had occupied the château during World War II, the count discovered the Marquis' papers in five large trunks. They had been there since the beginning of the 19th century and never been opened," he said, "mostly because of my great-great-grandfather, the younger son of the Marquis. When his father died in 1814 in the insane asylum at Charenton, he went there and burned everything he could. What remained, he put into these trunks—including letters and manuscripts, which he could have also destroyed. I don't know why he didn't, for he wanted to erase all traces of his father."

A Notch Lower The Marquis' son also changed the family title to "count," one notch lower on the nobility scale. While the present count is, in fact, the current Marquis de Sade, he has no interest in reviving the old title.

The Marquis de Sade, born in Paris in 1740, was the son of a diplomat who served as ambassador to Russia, England and Germany. After a distinguished career in the French cavalry, the Marquis acquired notoriety for his sexual preferences, in which works he had uncovered: 200 letters, 12 plays, two novels and a travel diary. "In the beginning he was horrified," Pavert said. "Now he's really proud of his ancestor."

Title Suit The count has also waged a one-man campaign against misuse of his ancestor's name, filing suit against Peter Brook when he produced Peter Weiss' play on Marat and Sade in Paris. "Marat and Sade never knew each other," the count said. "It's true that Sade had insane people perform his plays at Charenton but never with Marat." The Brook production opened under the title "Marat-X."

Similarly, the count embarked on a campaign to expunge "sadism" and "sadistic" from the French language, firing off frequent letters to newspapers and to the Académie Française. "In French 'sadistic' is synonymous with murder and martyrdom," the count noted. "The Marquis never killed."

In the foyer of the Château of Condé-en-Brie, a genealogical tree traces the Sade family from 1300. The Marquis was conspicuously scratched out until recently, when the Comte de Sade's daughter restored him to the genealogy.

Meanwhile, the count was restoring the château to its former glories. Dating from 1200, the château was transformed in the 16th century into a luxurious hunting lodge by the Prince de Condé, then in the 18th century into a palatial country estate by the next owner, the personal secretary to Louis XIV, Antoine Watteau. He used the walls of a room as a canvas for his students, who covered them with frescoes of landscapes and studies of Italian sculptures. Jean-Baptiste Oudry painted the four walls of the grand salon with hunting scenes.

PEOPLE: Bokassa Rebuffed in Bid For French Citizenship

Jean-Bedel Bokassa, exiled emperor of Central Africa, has been rebuffed in his bid for French citizenship. He says he will appeal a Paris court's ruling that he lost French citizenship in 1960, when the Central African Republic became independent. He claims he was legally recognized as a French national in 1958 and served 23 years in the French army. Bokassa, now living in exile in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, was overthrown in Central Africa in French-supported coup. The French claim he ordered the massacre of school children, among other crimes.

Italian artist Alberto Burri did not appear at the opening of a museum at Citra Di Castello, in central Italy, which is dedicated to his works. Burri, known for his collages of sackcloth, cracked paint and wood, has held one-man shows in New York's Guggenheim and other major U.S. and foreign museums. He recently announced he would give about 100 works, almost his life's output, to the museum at Citra Di Castello. The town, his birthplace, has spent $1 million on the museum, located in 16th-century palazzo. Local people say Burri is publicity shy and said he was believed to have flown to Los Angeles where he has a house.

Justice Department officials told prosecutors not to bring charges against a man who allegedly harbored fugitive Patty Hearst, says James Browning, former U.S. attorney in San Francisco. "They told me they felt the whole thing had run its course and was now water over the dam," said Browning, who successfully prosecuted Hearst, now Mrs. Shaw, on bank robbery charges. Browning, now a domestic relations counselor, told the San Francisco Chronicle that he wanted to prosecute Jack Scott, but officials in the Justice Department overruled him. Robert L. Keuch, then deputy assistant attorney general in the criminal division, said the office decided not to prosecute Scott because of "some what marginal evidence. In her book, 'Every Secret Thing,' Mrs. Shaw writes that Scott drove her across the country in 1974 and, with Mrs. Scott, rented 'safe houses' for her and fugitives Bill and Emily Harris in rural Pennsylvania and New York. The Harris are still in prison. In another development, Sacramento television station KCRA reported that Mrs. Shaw's family paid "a very substantial" portion of a $300,000 settlement of a suit filed by the family of a woman killed in a bank robbery in which Mrs. Shaw admitted she drove the getaway car. KCRA said the wrongful-death suit filed against the bank and unidentified defendants was settled out of court in July, 1978, for more than $300,000. Mrs. Shaw, 27, was abducted Feb. 4, 1974, while a University of California student. She was arrested Sept. 18, 1975, and convicted the following year of robbing a bank in league with her abductors. The Hearst newspaper business served less than two years in prison before her sentence was commuted by Jimmy Carter. Her autobiography has just been published.

Princess Diana has become the favorite member of Britain's royal family and the monarchy is more popular as a result of her marriage to Prince Charles, according to a poll carried by the Sunday News of the World. The newspaper said that nearly two-thirds of those interviewed rated the 25-year-old princess Number One. Her husband Prince Charles was second and her mother-in-law, Queen Elizabeth II, was third. In a 1973 poll, more than a third of those questioned wanted to abolish the monarchy. "Now only 6 percent want to scrap it," the newspaper reported.

Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn, who acted together for the first time in the new film, "On Golden Pond," took top honors at the Hollywood Women's Press Club's Golden Apple Awards. The two, named male and female stars of the year, were unable to attend the ceremony. Fonda remains in Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles where he has been hospitalized about a month while doctors monitor his new heart medication. Hepburn was in New York appearing in her new play, "The West Side Waltz." Cary Grant was named Number One. Her husband Prince Charles was second and her mother-in-law, Queen Elizabeth II, was third. In a 1973 poll, more than a third of those questioned wanted to abolish the monarchy. "Now only 6 percent want to scrap it," the newspaper reported.
